I have secondary progressive Multiple Sclerosis and quite often fall out of my wheelchair due to my chemotherapy treatment. I now use a very simple device called the 'Camel' to get me up from the floor to my wheelchair very easily. The 'Camel' (Complete Air Moving Elevating Lift) uses low air pressure to inflate it first to sit me up and then to raise me to a height where I can transfer. In my situation 2 people are needed to assist me, but the 'Camel' is very simple and easy to use and requires minimal instruction to operate it. The 'Camel' chair lift is a fantastic piece of equipment.
